M. we were enabled to renew the action, which was continued for half an hour, when the struck. She is called La Betfey, a thip privateer, fixed out at Bourdeaux, copper-bottom-ed, pierced for 20 guns, but mounting only 16 fix pounders, and had on board 118 men, 1 of whom was killed; the first and second captain and 6 feamen wounded; the second captain and three seamen since dead of their wounds. a part, was unanimoutly agreed to.
In the course of the discussion on this business, Mr. Alderman Lushington and Mr. Thounton took occasion to remark upon the reports that had gone a-broad respecting the subscription of a high personage. Mr Thornton particularly observed, that a communica-tion upon that subject had been sent to the Governor, (who was this day absent through indisposition,) from authority that might be relied on, stating, that an income of 60,000l. per annum derived from the Civil List was the whole fum at the disposal of his Majesty; which he could appropriate to this purpole. Mr KEMBLE mentioned the case of a schoolmaster, who, though a Frenchman, had inclosed him a 50l. note as his subscription. He had also called his scholars together, and having mentioned to them, that a fubscription was going on for defence of the State, they immediately, to the number of 90, emptied their pockets, and made up 201. more for the fame purpofe.

The report of an infurrection in Spain, which has been in very general circulation for the last two days, is not confirmed by the letters from Lisbon received by the mail.

We have received no journals from France fince the arrival of those of the 27th ultimo, the contents of which we are informed that private accounts from thence have been received, which state that the French have passed a decree, ordering an embargo to be laid on all the shipping in the different ports of the Republic, and directing that the vessels bought by the Americans now in French ports shall be detained there till after the attempt for invading England shall have been made.

This decree, it is also stated, contains a clause for prohibiting all persons from sending any money from France to England, under pain of death.

THE WHIG CLUB.

The meeting yesterday amounted to about 250 when the Chiefs came forward to avow their political creed.

Mr Fox, judging from the report in the newspapers, sporoved highly of the Duke of Norfolk's sentiments at the last meeting, which had so much exited the appre-hensions of the Minister. As to his Grace's observa-tions respecting Washington's successful exertions, he was fully persuaded that he meant nothing more than a reform by peaceable means. The objection to another part of his speech is equally erroneous: When his Grace mentioned "Our Sovereign—the Majesty of the people," he certainly intended merely to convey an idea, that the power of the people was paramount to every other authority. Those who denied this position, denied that the present family had a right to the Throne. Had they lived in the days of Geo. I. or Geo. II. they would have been fitigmatized as rank Jacobites.

The Duke of Norfolk expressed his thanks for the attention shewn by Mr Fox. The approbation of such a man was particularly gratifying. With regard to what had been said of Walhington, surrounded by two thousand men, his comparison went merely to a reform; and, whether he had or had not been dismissed from his offices on account of his conduct, he could freely de-clare, that whatever reform he recommended, was founded in peaceable means, not in violence.

Mr Erskine, Mr Grey, &c. delivered also their sen-

MOST DARING ROBBERY.

On the evening of yesterday seennight, one of the most audacious robberies was committed in the house of Mrs Elliot, of Queen Ann Street East, that has for a considerable time occurred.

In the evening, a little after nine o'clock, Mrs Elliot and her two sisters, sitting in her parlour, a rap came to the door, which was answered by the maid servant. A man enquired if Mrs Elliot was at home, and being answered in the affirmative, he said he had a letter for her; the maid took the letter, and turning to convey it to the parlour, at that moment the man with three queers, rushed into the house, and shut the door behind them; they pushed the maid into the parlour, which three of them entered with pistols in their hands. The Ladies, naturally in great alarm, asked them what they wanted? Upon which they said, "Your money and watches." Two of the Ladies delivered up their watches, and all of them their money.

The rushan then enquired for the Colonel (Colonel Waugh, who had died in Mrs E.'s house about three weeks before,) one of the villians saying, that he owed him a grudge for something that had happened in the West Indies, and would that night be revenged. On being told that the Colonel was dead, the savage rushan to the parlour, at that moment the man with three q-being told that the Colonel was dead, the favage ruffian expedied no furprise;—they then proceeded to work.

One of the four, with a pistol in his hand, was left to guard the Ladies; one was left in the passage, to give alarm in case of any person coming to the door; and the two others proceeded up stairs, from whence they brought down into the passage no less than six trunks, four belonging to the deceased officer, and two to Mrs Elliott.

This occupied them about an hour, after which they told the Ladies they must walk down stairs. At their request they indulged them with a light, and marched the three Ladies and their fervant down to the back kitchen. They complained of its being damp, and of their having no feats there; upon which one of the rufhans observed, that the front kitchen was too near the ftreet, but he would bring them chairs, which he did resordingly. One of the ruffians guarded the Ladies in the back kitchen, as before, while the others profeeded to rifle Mrs Elliot's drawers and bureau in the parlours, from which they took about twelve or fourteen pounds in money, some rings, plate, and other articles of value. They next, very coolly, carried off the frunks, which occupied them a confiderable time, as it was near twelve o'clock before they finally left the house. This they knew from their guard leaving them, and the outer door being foon after flut with a noise. Upon coming up stairs, the floors of the rooms were covered with papers and cloths, which they had thrown about in fearch of money.

The four ruffians were disguised, one with a crape over his face, and the other three with pieces of linen covering their faces, except their eyes and nofe. Two of them had a strong Irish accent, one of whom was for putting the Ladies to death.

On the same night, the villains, with their booty stop-ped at a public house near Blackfriars Bridge, and knocking at the door, demanded of the landlord, if they could be accommodated with a room to put their luggage in, as they had just come out of the country Being answered in the affirmative, one of them got out of the coach, and carried two trunks into the houle, A coal-heaver and a cooper, happening to be still in the house, the landlord hinted his suspicion to them, upon which the coal-heaver seized the villian who had alighted by the wrift; upon feeing this, the hackney coach, with the other three, drove off; but, as the number was observed, there are hopes of their being traced, and discovered. The man who was taken was examined on Saturday at Guildhall, and committed for trial at the enfuing fessions at the Old Bailey.

THE HAMBURGH MAIL.

The first of the three Hamburgh mails that were due,

arrived this morning.

The intelligence from Venice states, that the King of Naples would march 25,000 men to take possession of Rome, and to restore tranquillity. The other intelligence is by no means interrelling.

BOLOGNA, Jan. 8.

It now appears that the original pretext for infurrection at Rome was the dearth of provisions.—A number of malcontents affembled on the 27th ult. uttering loud complaints. In confequence of this the Government ordered the guards to be doubled, and reinforced all quarters of the city with troops of the line and militia. The infurgents, upon being ordered to disperse, find upon the gurrds, and wounded two persons. The malcontents now collected themselves near the French ambaffador's palace, where their behaviour obliged the Papal troops to fire upon them, when the French General, Duphot, unfortunately fell with a number of the infurgents. On the 29th a proclamation was published by the Government, to quiet the apprehentions of fran-gers, and Cardinal Braschi and M. Galeppi set off to Naples, to obtain the affiltance of the King.

Monday, Mr Baffet, the meffenger, arrived from Vienna, with advices from Sir Morton Eden, as also with overland dispatches from India, supposed of great importance, relative to the expedition against the Manillas, which, from some accounts received by the last India thips, we are led to think has not been attempted, for the present, to be carried into execution. It was highly politic in the Government there not to detach fo large a force from the country. No fooner was the ex-pedition against the Manillas known, than Tippoo began perceptibly to recruit his army, particularly his cavalry; and many letters which we have feen express a very confident opinion that he would have taken an immediate advantage of the absence of our troops to attack our posts. Indeed, the forces had already left the Presidency of Bengal, and had arrived at Prince of Wales's Island, which was the place of rendezvous; and those from Madras were under orders for embarkation, when about the 24th of August, counter orders were given to recall the troops to their different posts, and the expedition was altogether abandoned.

Duke of Queenfberry.

A few days ago, a tradefinan brought one of his apprentices before the Magistrates, upon account that he had repeatedly absented himself from work, without permission, associated with idle company on the streets, and afted in other respects with contumacy. The charges being fully substantiated, the Magistrates sentenced him to be committed to Bridewell for two months. It is to be hoped that this punithment will have a faintary effect upon the young man himfelf, and we mention it as an admonition to others, who may be chargeable with a fimilar conduct, and as a warning to all apprentices to guard them against falling into such practices.

In addition to the many patriotic examples factor by the public at large, it gives us great pleafure to mention, that of the recruiting officers, and parties in the Edinburgh district, who yesterday, at their paratle, unanimously agreed to subscribe to the voluntary dustribution at present going on, in the following proportion: Inspecting field-officer, three months pay in captains, one mouth; subscribes, the days; non-commissioned officers, drumners, and privates, two days each; and the officers, non-commissioned officers, privates, see whose regiments are abroad, at the same time expressed their define of being employed in any manner that should seem ginerita are abroad, at the fame time expressed their testire of being employed in any manner that should seem best calculated to assist the other forcer in the kingdom, and requested Colonel Francisc to transmit the same to Major-General Fox, Inspector-General of the recruiting service.

No foner was this patriolic act known, than the Rev. Mr Egganow, one of the Prebends of our Cathedral, fent five guineas, inclosed in a most polite card, to Lieutenant Colonel, Rev. on the commending officer, requesting Colonel RENTON, the commanding officer, requesting that it might be given to the foldiers, to drink his Ma-jesty's health, and as a token of his high approbation

We molt fervently hope that the following melancholy accident, which occurred on Tuesday last, will operate as a memorable caution:—As William Warson, a servant of Captain Normis, at Fans, was employed in driving a threshing machine, his attention, as is supposed, having been caught by some other object, he unfortunately got betwirt the end of the start and one of the pillars, and was crushed to death upon the start. We are former to learn he has left a widow and fpot. We are forry to learn he has left a widow and leveral children

We are informed that Mr Bell, author of the Dif-cources on Wounds, is preparing a new edition of that book, accompanied with a fystematic view of military furgery—and that he has prepared drawings of gun shot wounds, of the ulcers, diseases and other accidents which follow after gun-shot wounds; of instruments also, and operations, such especially as are oftenest needed in time of battle, or in military hospitals.

The examination of witnesses, in the case of Tho-mas Colthord, before the High Court of Justiciary, on Munday, was over by one o'clock, when the Jury were inclosed, and on Tunsday returned a verdict, finding, all in one vice, the pannel Guilty. The Court pronounced sentence, ordaining him to be imprisoned in the tolbooth of Edinburgh till the 20th inst, then to be sent to Haddington, and on the 23d to be taken to the place where the crime was committed, there to receive place where the crime was committed, there to receive ten lashes; and to be whipped, the same day, through the town of Haddington.
